BIG DISCOVERY.

Pittsburg-Searchlight Uncovers Vast Body of Milling Ore.

SEARCHLIGHT, Oct. 5.—That gold is where you find it is a vertical, demonstrated this week, when the management of the Pittsburg-Searchlight mine, owned by local capital, made the discovery that what was supposed to be porphyry, of no value, through which they were sinking a 200-foot shaft, has proved to be an immense deposit of good milling ore.

The Pittsburg shaft was sunk away from the main ledge and is a vertical, it being planned to drift for the ledge at 200 feet. This ledge where it outcrops shows shipping values from the grass roots and is twenty feet in width. A number of stringers were encountered between the surface and the 175-foot level, where the workings now reach, and fabulous values were encountered.

It was only yesterday that General Manager Black out of curiosity took a horning from the waste matter coming out of the shaft, and the long string of colors was a revelation. Other samplings were taken from bottom to top of the shaft and the same good results obtained.

A number of experts have viewed the find and agree that the territory around the Pittsburg, two miles east of town, and in a district heretofore considered of little value, is almost identical with that of Goldfield, and believe that the same rich chimneys exist below. It is also agreed that the values shot through the supposed porphyry come from the main ledge, which has proved exceedingly rich wherever opened.

Many prospectors who had only lukewarm faith in their holdings about the Pittsburg have begun to pan the surface, and this has demonstrated that the immense ore body covers hundreds of acres of territory and is of a good milling grade.

The first intimation that values existed in the character of rock found to the east was given by a Chinaman, Sam Yet, who recently sold a group of claims to an English syndicate. The rock he exhibited, and for which he claimed values, was passed around with a knowing wink by the prospectors and others, who believed the Chink had been the victim of a hoax, but now every mining man and prospector in the district is sampling the conglomerate porphyry and big results are expected.

With ore in sight, the Pittsburg is doubtless the biggest milling proposition in southern Nevada, while its high grade will bring in sufficient capital to develop the milling grades.

A year ago this property was given away to its present owners for doing the assessment work on this and another group nearby.

Do you know that Pineapple Carbollized acts like a poultice in drawing out inflammation and poison? It is antiseptic. For cuts, burns, eczema, cracked hands it is immediate relief. Sold by Tonopah Drug Co.

It is a well known fact that persons living in the Pine forests do not suffer from kidney diseases. One dose of Pineules at night usually relieves backache. 30 days' treatment $1.00. Your money refunded if not satisfied. Sold by Tonopah Drug Co.

LONG OVERLOOKED MINING DISTRICT

CHRYSOPOPOLIS AGAIN IS CLAIMING THE ATTENTION OF MINING MEN.

A correspondent of the Inyo Independent, signing himself D. W. T., sends the following interesting letter to that paper:

"In response to your request for some information regarding old Chrysopolis I take pleasure in writing you even at this date the accompanying lines. Please be good enough to pardon the delay that has occurred, for I have been so very busy that I have lately had absolutely no time or energy for letter writing. In this letter I have endeavored to confine my remarks to a conservative statement of facts, and I do not think that I have overdrawn or unduly colored anything. The facts as enumerated can be authenticated on the ground at anytime by any one who is interested enough to investigate. We have a country here that will both warrant and bear investigation.

"Some thirty or more years ago, as you and some of your readers are doubtless aware, Chrysopolis was in the heyday of its fame. It was then from all accounts and appearances, a very prosperous camp, and thousands upon thousands of dollars worth of oriferous ores were taken out of the old workings. The condition of the mines today, and the character of the huge piles of dumps show this.

"The ores sought after in those days were, of course, free milling and some of those ores must have been exceedingly rich, for I have frequently discovered in the veins of the old workings in their tunnels and drifts and stopes, pieces of quartz freely speckled with gold. Chrysopolis was in those days a great camp without doubt, everything considered. It is a most interesting place today; and I have the impression that it will be a great camp again in the not very far distant future. Indeed, there are people who affirm that we have here the making of another Cripple Creek and Butte city combined, and these people are fairly well informed and conservative. For my own part, I may say that I have been in almost every mining camp in all the western states, and in portions of Mexico and Canada, and in all my travels I must candidly confess that I have not seen anywhere such an interesting study—topographically and petrographically—from a miner's viewpoint, as we have here in this portion of the Inyo range. The hills—even to a casual and uninitiated observer passing on a train—present an unusually attractive and highly mineralized appearance; and when one gets near enough to take a close observation, one is amazed at the intensely interesting formation both geologically and mineralogically.

"The country rock is a metamorphosed granite intersected every hundred feet or so by immense dykes of quartzose schist. These dykes range from ten feet to fifty feet and 100 feet wide. Paralleling and alternating with them are numerous large veins of quartz. These veins and dykes outcrop prominently on the surface, and run generally in a northerly and southerly direction. They are heavily capped and strongly impregnated with iron here and there, and will carry more or less values in gold and copper throughout their entire length and breadth and thickness. Crossing these formations again, and cutting the mat frequent intervals at angles of 30 degrees to 45 degrees are massive porphyry and greenstone dykes. The quartz ledges run from ten to twelve inches to five and ten and even more feet in width. Pannings of gold can be got from almost any of them, and assays run all the way from $5 to $1000 and $1500 a ton in gold and 5 to 20 per cent copper! Now do you wonder at my saying it is a most interesting country? And don't you think it would be more correct to call it a most wonderful country?

"When I mention it to outside people, and begin to tell them about the formation, and ledges, and values, they look at me skeptically, and quizzically, and say 'What makes the grass grow?' They ask 'Why then, if the veins were so large, and the ores so rich, was the camp shut down and deserted? It is right on the railway and the Owens river meanders its peaceful but intricate way down the valley only a stonethrow from the mines. There are good mill sites and handy transportation facilities at its very doorstep. It is within easy reach of civilization and all its comforts and enjoyments. Why, then, has it been permitted to lie dormant so, all these years?' These and others such as these, are the remarks and questions flung at me by people who don't know the country and its possibilities. The former question I might truthfully endeavor to answer, but the latter I can only surmise and guess at. There are doubtless very many reasons all equally plausible and erroneous. As you are aware it is a hard, long, and uphill task trying to revivify an old camp, and re-instate it in favor. Capital is shy, and baulky, and unbelieving. Far away birds have fine looking feathers; people will go out of their way to view a mirage, while more real and interesting things near at hand, and easy of access and investigation, are carelessly and inadvertently overlooked.

"In the early days, as I have remarked, the pioneer miners sought only for the rich free milling gold and silver ores. Indeed it was only the very rich ore that could be profitably handled in those days. The cost of mining and hauling and treatment was very excessive; and owing to the crude and wasteful methods of milling then in vogue, it was only the bonanza free milling ores that would bear these charges and leave a sufficient surplus of profit to justify mining at all. When they got to a depth in their workings where the free milling ores ceased and the sulphide ores commenced they of course had to abandon the mines, as they had no facilities for properly and economically treating the base ores. At any rate that is my way of explaining it, and I humbly and honestly believe that I am not a great ways from the mark."
